ABOUT US

THE FUTURE OF HIGHER EDUCATION BY “Universidad Camilo José Cela”

Camilo José Cela has a campus located in Villafranca del Castillo and one in Almagro (in the center of Madrid). It offers a wide variety of university degrees and masters.

We are a group of first year psychology and preschool teaching students working in our English 1 class.

During this process, we have reflected on several things that are essential in providing a good university experience. We have concluded that universities need to exploit resources, change teacher models, and foster more cultural exchange in order to create a better social environment.

HACKATHON RESOLUTION

“What does today’s university need to be better? What 3 things should we eliminate? What 3 things we should keep?”

Eliminate

- Exorbitant university fees
- Old-fashioned assessment techniques based only on performance goals and not mastery goals
- The tendency, in Spain, to change educational policies at political whim

keep

- Scholarships so that a larger part of the population has access to education
- Facilities that have functioned throughout the history of education such as the library, cafeteria and student spaces
- Welcome activities and informative sessions to promote greater social interaction
